ChemicalInfo announces major enhancements to service to help increase subscriber efficiency within the NextGen database

ChemicalInfo, providers of the most comprehensive online databases for chemical and pharmaceutical companies and those who do business with them, announces Q3 service enhancements for subscribers. As part of the company's ongoing commitment to be the industry's preeminent resource for buyers and sellers of chemicals and pharmaceuticals, NextGen now features Mass Email Functionality and Search by Patent Expiration.

The ability to mass email within the portal will help save subscribers time by allowing them to quickly connect with the companies and contacts listed in the database. Users can now select multiple companies from a single search and send an email out in just a few simple steps.

The ability to search by patent expiration is available to all PathFinder Plus users. This adds an additional way to search along with search by name, CAS, category, country and service or reaction type already offered in the database.

The ability to search by the patent expiry allows users to quickly see what is coming off patent by date. This new feature complements API producer information included in the DWCP and synthesis path and patent data covered in PathFinder; along with sales figures and volumes powered by PIERS.

"These additional features now offered in NextGen will help our subscribers save time and allow them to connect with the companies and contacts and plan their business strategies more efficiently in 2016." said ChemicalInfo CEO, Ernie Cote.
